Time

Tick-tock, the clock begins its rhyme,
Measuring moments, the dance of time.
From dawn to dusk, a rhythmic play,
Time marching on in its own special way.

Seconds, minutes, and hours in a race,
Each one with its unique pace.
Days turn to weeks, then months unfold,
A story of time, ancient and bold.

Seasons change in this grand ballet,
Spring's buds bloom, then fade away.
Summer's warmth, autumn's cool embrace,
Winter whispers, a quiet, snowy trace.

In the circle of time, memories spun,
A journey of days, a marathon run.
Yet, in every tick, in every chime,
Life finds its rhythm in the dance of time.

1. What does the clock measure in the poem? _____
2. What are the two adjectives used to describe time in the second stanza?

3. How does the poem describe the changing seasons? _____

4. What is the overall theme of the poem? _____

5. Write one more stanza for this poem.
